How EMS works

During traditional strength training the brain sends bioelectronic impulses which stimulate certain muscles to contract. However, not all muscles have a well-developed connection to the brain and these muscles are not activated as easily and therefore they will not develop so well. This way we can never train with full force, even if we want to.

EMS (electrical muscle stimulation) technology however, with low-strength electrical impulses, directly stimulates our deep muscles thus deceiving our body's natural reactions and training almost 100% of our musculature.

EMS training is a completely safe way of training and as such it has been used for medical and rehabilitation purposes for a long time as well.
